Headline:
Unsettled weekend ahead, getting drier next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Skies and showers clearing for most moving into the evening, chance of isolated showers. Winds easing but still breezy. Band of cloud and showers reaching Cornwall and Devon by dawn, with the showers possibly heavy at times. Minimum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Saturday:
A band of showers pushing eastwards through the morning. Becoming more isolated in the afternoon, leaving spells of sunshine for many. Winds breezy, feeling cool. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunshine and showers, some heavy and potentially thundery, through Sunday. Showers continuing into Monday and Tuesday, but plenty of sunny spells for many. Remaining breezy.
